Fuller Seminary Lecture Series Focuses on Children at Risk

"Children and the Mission of God" was the theme of a lecture series offered at Fuller Theological Seminary in early November. The problem of children at risk is becoming an increasingly important area of emphasis at the seminary. "A major, growing thrust of our school is a global engagement with children at risk: AIDS orphans, inner city youth, the street children of the world," said Doug McConnell, dean of Fuller's School of Intercultural Studies. "We're examining what we can do--in partnership with the church -- to care for children, protect them, offer them justice, and present them with the life-saving message of the gospel."
