New texts by Archimedes come to light

New York, USA (NY Times): The Archimedes Palimpsest, sold at auction at Christie's for $2 million in 1998, is best known for containing some of the oldest copies of work by the great Greek mathematician who gives the manuscript its name. [â€] This year imagers at Stanford University used powerful X-ray fluorescence imaging to read its final pages, which are being interpreted, transcribed and translated by a group of scholars in the United States and Europe.

Canada invests $2.1 million in interpreters to limit domestic violence

Ottawa, Canada (CNW): The Ontario government is investing $2.1 million in interpreter services so that victims of domestic violence get the help they need in the language they know best, Ontario Minister of Citizenship and Immigration Mike Colle and Minister Responsible for Women's Issues, Sandra Pupatello announced today. [â€] The Language Interpreter Services program provides grants to 10 agencies across the province to deliver interpretation services that are available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week in over 60 languages.

$40,000 bounty by Taliban for Afghan interpreters

Kandahar, Afghanistan (Oregon): Since Mike Manaton doesn't speak Farsi, he took an interpreter on his frequent missions. That's how he met Farhad. The Americans hired a number of interpreters, but Farhad stood out. First of all, he was just 17. Farhad had negotiated a job that allowed him to go to high school in the morning and work as a translator in the afternoon. "A good thing about the coalition forces is they loved education," Farhad says today. "Serving as an interpreter is dangerous," Mike says, calling Farhad "very brave. While I worked in Kandahar, the Taliban bounty for any Afghan supporting the coalition was $40,000."

Pennsylvania to standardize qualifications for courtroom interpreters

Pennsylvania, USA (PTR): The state Senate unanimously approved a bill that would standardize qualifications for courtroom interpreters of foreign languages and interpreters for the deaf. The measure has been sent to Gov. Ed Rendell for his signature. The bill, sponsored by State Sen. Jay Costa, D-Forrest Hills, would create a statewide system of uniform certification for courtroom translators.

North Carolina to crack down on inefficiencies in the interpreting system

North Carolina, USA (WS Journal): Around the first of the year, state officials will begin cracking down on inefficiencies in the interpreting system used throughout North Carolina's courts, taking over a job previously left to local officials. [â€] There's a shortage of certified interpreters and a growing number of defendants who don't speak English. As a result, some court officials have used interpreters who aren't certified. And as that has happened, there have been some incidents of unethical practices on the part of interpreters.

Dubai: court case adjourned for lack of sign language interpreter

Dubai, UAE (Gulfnews): A judge yesterday adjourned the case of a hearing and speech impaired suspect, being tried for having consensual sex and drinking, for lack of a translator who can use sign language. [â€¦] Eventually, judges who handle such cases requests the public prosecution to send a translator who knows sign language. They are usually brought in from special centres.

Child interpreters in Oklahoma

Oklahoma, USA (NewsOK): According to 2000 census data, 188,035 Oklahomans older than 18 reported speaking a language other than English at home, with Spanish by far the most-common language. Of non-English speakers, 22 percent indicated they spoke English poorly or not at all. [â€¦] Translation services are few, and they largely cater to government and corporate clients. Oklahoma lags behind Dallas by two decades in terms of its resources for non-English speakers, former immigrant Beatriz Myer said, adding: "â€œWe have to really get more translation services."

Consultation on National Occupational Standards in Translation

London, UK (CILT): In the summer of 2006, CILT carried out a consultation exercise on the National Occupational Standards in Translation. Since then CILT has done two things. It has analysed the responses, which you will find in the document Consultation Report 1 on the Revision of the Translation Standards. It has reviewed the findings of the consultation with the help of the steering group and come up with a plan for action to revise the standards.
