Open Office

As most of my students know I am a believer in the open source community, as evidenced by the blog software I am currently using. I try as much as I can to use open source products in my classes as I can. I teach Java with the netBeans ide. I teach C++ with devc++ from Bloodshed. So I went looking for an Office replacement.

There were a few things I needed this replacement to do. It should do everything that the Office professional had at the time (Word, Excel, PowerPoint, and Access). OpenOffice.org, or OOo, was at 1.5 and it did not have a stable database application that did not need a separate installation of a database engine. So, it did not meet my original premise. Then along came OOo 2.0. It had a much greater translation capability between Office files and the new open document format. It used the Open Document format standard, which guaranteed that anything that used that standard could open the files. It even came with a database engine for the Base part of the project.

With this increased stability, and the increased capability of the spreadsheet to handle full-sized Excel spreadsheets, I was able to recommend this product for those who did not want to help Microsoft.

I find the Product to be a fine replacement for Office if you wish to go the anti-Microsoft group.

Open Office

Global Government Mnes Policy Strategy

Kettle Move ; Global Government Mnes Policy Strategy Global Public Management Revolution: Challenges for Governance by Donald F. Kettl, Over the last two decades, governments around the world have launched ambitious efforts to reform the way they manage their programs. Citizens in nations like Mongolia and Sweden, New Zealand, and the United States have demanded smaller, cheaper, more effective governments. They have also asked for more programs and better services. To resolve this paradox, governments have experimented with scores of ideas to be more productive, to improve performance, and to reduce costs. In The Global Public Management Revolution, Donald F. Kettl charts the basic models of reform that are being employed worldwide, including New Zealand's "new public management," the U.S. effort at "reinventing government," and related efforts in developed and developing nations. In reviewing the standard strategies and tactics behind these reforms, Kettl has identified six common core ideas: the search for greater productivity; more public reliance on private markets; a stronger orientation toward service; more decentralization from national to subnational governments; increased capacity to devise and track public policy; and tactics to enhance accountability for results. Kettl predicts that reform and reinvention will likely become mantras for governments of all stripes, requiring the instinct for reform to be hardwired into government practice. Ultimately, this strategy means coupling the reform impulse with governance -- government's increasingly important relationship with civil society and the institutions that shape modern life. Kettle Move Market Unbound: Unleashing Global Capitalism by Lowell Bryan, The profit opportunities available today in the global capital markets are so large, and the capital seeking those opportunities is so vast and so highly mobile, that we are entering into an entirely new era of capitalism. The process of globalization has been going on gradually for decades, but the world's capital markets have now reached critical mass. They are poised to fuse into a single global capital market, and we are about to enter into an era of explosive growth as a result. Market Unbound is the first book to provide a dynamic blueprint of this challenging new global market. Authors Lowell Bryan and Diana Farrell of McKinsey & Company, Inc., explore the enormous effect this revolution will have on governments, corporations, and individual investors. Although the global economy has already undergone major - and irreversible - change, the transformations yet to come promise the most significant economic developments since the Industrial Revolution. In the uncertain future, one thing is clear: the global capital market is increasingly dictating the actions and policies of governments, as opposed to governments dictating the actions and policies of the market. Kettle Move Tallaght Strategy - In Irish politics, the Tallaght Strategy was a policy followed by the Fine Gael political party starting in 1987. Under this policy, the Fine Gael opposition party would not oppose economic reforms proposed by the Fianna Fáil minority government in the national interest. Opposition to U.S. foreign policy - As the United States grew into a global power, its government has become more involved with other countries. This has often led to opposition to U. Global Policy Forum - Global Policy Forum, or GPF, is an organization seeking to promote accountability of international organizations such as the United Nations and strengthen international law. GPF holds that free markets are not enough to ensure global prosperity, and therefore is opposed to libertarian groups such as the Cato Institute that oppose publicly-funded foreign aid. Global Strategy - Firms that pursue a Global Strategy are faced with great pressures from cost reductions but with weak pressure for local responsiveness. globalgovernmentmnespolicystrategy The Next Global Stage offers a roadmap for action in the world that's beginning to emerge. Tourist offices. Getting it wrong.

FOXTROTS

Â

Fox " sly.Â Trots " left-leaning (Trotsky) plus its more insalubrious meaning.Â Foxtrots " leading the industry in a dance.

Â

Â

Â

2007 March 19

Â

Â

Tourist offices. Getting it wrong.Â

Â

The pattern is depressingly-common. New appointed administrators of the visitor business change what was there before " good or bad. Usually the reasons are political; the outgoing administration was from a rival party, so by definition must have the wrong policies.Â

Â

Some changes look like well-meaning ideas from an inexperienced team driven by what it wants for the destination, not what travellers want from the destination.Â

Â

Sustainability and environment-friendly tourism are

Thailandâ€™s new credos for the new governmentâ€™s new minister of tourism, Suvit Yodmani. He wants to re-orient the destinationâ€™s tourism strategy - less prestigious and costly projects, and more focus on a sustainable environment and training.Â

Â

The minister promises funds to restore 1000 sites and monuments of historical or natural importance. The promotional theme of â€

Bangkok, fashion hubâ€™ has been dropped, replaced by â€kitchen, window to the worldâ€™ (literal translation), promoting

Thailand through Thai restaurants around the world.Â

Â

We presume these policies will be adjusted when it is realised they are costly, ineffective, or when visitor growth slows. But perhaps the first move could be to speed up counting of visitors; so far it has just February 2006 data.Â

Â

Nepalâ€™s new minister for tourism and aviation has proposed a master plan for tourism. Â

Â

This will incorporate policies, strategies, and action plans for development, expansion, and promotion of the visitor business. The minister hopes to better integrate private initiatives with the governmentâ€™s tourism agenda.Â

Â

The government puts peace and security as vital elements of any tourism development. The minister wants the travel trade to develop special packages for travellers from

China and India.

India is already

Nepalâ€™s largest inbound market, but has fallen in recent years " as have most markets.Â

Â

The Nepal Tourism Board will restructured again to become a National Tourism Council which will integrate representatives from all visitor sectors. And Air

Nepal will also be converted into a company entity - which should give it more autonomy in commercial decisions.Â

Â

Is there any change here, apart from renaming the NTO? Â

Â

Then there is

Indonesia. As we noted last month, for the second year running, the countryâ€™s minister of tourism, Jero Wacik, did not attend the destinationâ€™s most important travel exhibition, Time, run by a semi-government department.Â

Â

Wacik (whose first name, embarrassingly, is changed to Zero by his detractors) can be found in Berlin for ITB and

London for WTM, however.Â

Today I was given an invitation to visit the Al Noor Association for the Blind, one of three centres I understand they have throughout the country.

I was very honoured to meet and be escorted by their dedicated patron, her highness Sayyida Aliya Al Said. I was introduced to different members of the organisation, and shown around the centre, that is soon to be replaced by a much bigger building.

I was fascinated by the beautiful jewellery that blind people were making here, with matching necklaces, bracelets and earrings made from colourful semi-precious stones, with exquisite harmonising colours. I was blessed with a set for my wife and two daughters before I left, so my family also will always remember my visit there now!

I also felt some very soft scarves and head coverings, crocheted without needles, but rather on the fingers of the individuals- a Japanese craft they had recently been taught.

I was shown around their I.T. department, and listened to the speech-output coming out, not in English as with my own system, but in perfect Arabic!

They also have a growing braille library and audio cassettes for educational purposes, and I understand they plan a visit to the RNIB in London to give them more ideas to continue serving with great dedication the blind people of Oman.

My final activity before speaking to them all was to represent Great Britain in a "ping-pong" tournament against some of Oman's best!

The game is really quite different to conventional ping-pong, except for the fact that the same bats are used on a similar sized table.

The table is bordered by wooden sides some 12 inches high, and an oblong box is sunk into the centre of each end of the table. The ball is about twice as big as a ping-pong ball, and is much harder, with some small balls inside to give it a tinkling sound when moving.

The purpose of the game is to get the ball into the depression protected by the player at the other end, and points are scored whenever a "goal" is scored!

It is actually a very fast-moving game, with the ball hurtling off the sides, crashing around, and I soon found an enthusiastic crowd around me cheering loudly as we smashed the ball at each other's goal- but unfortunately I ended up being beaten 3 nil in good style, despite my energetic and acrobatic actions- skill seems to be the key, not showmanship, but great fun had by all!

I was very honoured to be accompanied by her highness during my visit, who also helped with the translation when I spoke to the gathering after coffee and biscuits.

I came away feeling I had made lots of new friends, understood a little better the global commonality of blindness, and the fellowship we enjoy facing the challenges it brings with it.

A quiet evening with Imran and the head of the bank's HR department here, Khalifa Al Said at an outside restaurant with Richard ended with Kaleefi and Richard heading off the airport to visit the customs there.

Our life raft for our long water crossings flights that had been sent out had not been cleared in time before the Omani weekend here (Thursday afternoon and all Friday), and it took all of Kaleefi royal blood line, HR connections and diplomacy to finally get it released and left with our microlight at around 0100 hours this morning!

United Nations calls for release of Ajmal Nashqbandi

Kabul, Afghanistan (UN): The United Nations mission in Afghanistan called on the Taliban on Monday to release an Afghan reporter kidnapped along with an Italian journalist captured earlier this month in the country's south. Ajmal Nashqbandi, a freelance reporter, was working as a translator for Daniel Mastrogiacomo of the Italian daily La Repubblica when they were kidnapped in Helmand province on March 5.

Growing concern for Ajmal Naqshbandi

Kabul, Afghanistan (AKI): There is growing concern among Afghan journalists for the fate of Ajmal Naqshbandi, the interpreter of Italian reporter Daniele Mastrogiacomo, who they believe is still held by the Taliban. They accuse the Italian government of having completely forgotten the young journalist who was accompanying Mastrogiacomo when he and his driver were seized by Taliban fighters in Helmand province on 5 March. "The silence of the Rome government on the fate of Ajmal Naqshbandi is nothing short of shameful," said Zia Boumia, of the committee for the defence of Afghan journalists, in an interview with Adnkronos International (AKI).

Laleh Bakhtiar on the first English translation of the Qurân™an by an American woman

New York, USA (AM): A brief announcement about this Qurân™an translation was made at the WISE Conference: Women's Islamic Initiative in Spirituality and Equity held in New York in November of 2006. There was a great deal of interest shown by the participants. The translator, Laleh Bakhtiar, Ph.D. who has been referred to as a bridge between two cultures was swamped with participants wanting to speak with her about the project.

Malicious Code transmitted via web translation services

New York, USA (ET): A new trend identified by Finjan researchers is the existence of malicious code on webpages served by automatic translation services, such as those offered by many leading websites and search engine companies. The report presents several instances of malicious code discovered by Finjan security researchers on translated webpages. This is another example of attackers' increasing creativity and sophistication, i.e., using the translation process to obscure the source of the malicious code behind the otherwise reputable translation service.
