Book Discussion - Colossians Remixed

Before jumping into this month™s book discussion on Colossian™s Remixed by Brian Walsh and Sylvia Keesmaat, I want to recommend that you read a few things. First read Colossians - right now before you go any further in this dialogue. Then if you haven™t read Colossians Remixed (or even if you have) I highly recommend reading the summary here. (and if you™re interested a chapter by chapter commentary/summary here). This is a dense book that takes more space than I want to use here to summarize, so I will point you to those who are better at that short of thing than I.

I first read this book about a year ago and can say that it has been one of the best rock my world emergingish books that I have read. This is a Biblical commentary (on Colossians if you haven™t gathered that yet) that is light years away from traditional commentaries that I am used to. It is, well, remixed. It explores history and cultural themes, it imagines conversations, it explores philosophical assumptions of morality and truth before applying them to the text, it respects the readers™ doubts and questions, it rewrites passages for modern readers, and it engages in â€dialogâ€ with opposing viewpoints.

As the subtitle proclaims, this book is about subverting the empire. And the words of Paul address life under this empire. The Roman Empire held sway in Paul™s world. The empire let you live in â€peaceâ€ as long as you gave them sufficient respect - paid your taxes, said the right things about Caesar, places images of Caesar and Rome in prominent places in your home and town, didn™t question the military or slave systemâ€ Walsh and Keesmaat argue that the message of Christianity (as portrayed in Colossians) subverts that empire. Not only does that message challenge the values of Rome, it challenges the empire we live under today - the western empire of globalization, militarism, and consumerism. We are part of these empires but are called to resist them and subvert their power.

For discussion I™ve selected just a few of the ideas presented in the book as jumping off points. I know I™m ignoring huge sections (like the discussion on truth) but this is really long already (there is just too much good stuff here). So please feel free to bring up any other questions, quotes, or themes that you want. Let™s dive in (and please don™t feel overwhelmed, comment on what you want!) -

1. The question of interpretation. What is your reaction to this quote? â€Reading is always from somewhere. We always read from a particular historical, cultural and geographical place. The question that we must ask is, how do we â€placeâ€ ourselves, how do we discern the times and spirits that invariably influence our reading of a text like Colossians? What are the questions, crises and opportunities that we necessarily (and legitimately) bring to this text?â€• p19

2. Empires are defined here as (1) built on systemic centralizations of power, (2) secured by structures of socioeconomic and military control, (3) religiously legitimated by powerful myths and (4) sustained by a proliferation of imperial images that captivate the imagination of the population. In comparing how both the Roman and current Western empires maintain the status quo of privilege and oppression the authors give the examples of â€œmost major corporations use the equivalent of slave labor to produce clothing, toys, tools and some foods. Most of this labor is done by people in Asia, Latin America or Africa. While cash-crops farmers include both men and women, the majority of those who work in sweatshops, on coffee plantations and in the sex trade are women and children. â€ although our culture does not openly subscribe to an ethos of patriarchy, racism, and classism, the effects of the global economic market create the same kind of societal dynamic that was present in first-century Rome.â€• (p 59-60). I want to ask the same questions the authors then ask - â€œIn the face of an empire that rules through military and economic control, what is the shape of a community that serves a ruler who brings reconciliation and peace by sacrificial death rather than military might? If the empire elevates economic greed and avarice into civic virtues, while Paul dismisses such a way of life as idolatrous, then how does a Christian community shaped by Paulâ€™s gospel live life in the empire?â€• (p61).

3. Poetry of subversion. The authors explore how the hymn presented in Colossians 1:15-20 is a hymn of subversion of Empire. It takes the language of Empire and proclaims the supremacy of Christ over Caesar - radical, subversive, dangerous. They then contribute a â€œetargumâ€• (an extended translation and expansion that reads our world through the eyes of the text) of this passage. You can read it on p.85 or here. (and a short article on the point they are making here). What is your reaction to the poem? Does this imagination of an alternative to empire make sense?

4. But wait a minute you cry! Arenâ€™t Christians supposed to subject ourselves to the governing authorities and all that? The authors respond - â€œRather than read [Romans 13] as providing carte blanche legitimation for any regime, regardless of how idolatrous and oppressive it might be, we suggest that Paul is actually limiting the authority of the state. The state is a servant of God for our good. it has no legitimacy or authority in and of itself, apart from subjection to the rule of God. and when the state clearly abrogates its responsibility to do good, when it acts against the will of God, then the Christian community has a responsibility to call it back to its rightful duty and even to engage in civil disobedience (see Acts 12:6-23). The state has no authority to do evilâ€•. (p185)

5. In Colossians 3:5-17 Paul tells us to put to death the things of our earthly nature (sexual immorality, greed). The authors write, â€œWhy end a list of sexual sins with an economic sin? Because sexual sin is fundamentally a matter of covetousness, an insatiable, self-gratifying greed that has the control and consumption of the other person as its ultimate desireâ€• (p160) and â€œIn our culture, the unrestrained economic greed of global market capitalism pimps sexual promiscuity along with its entertainment products, communications systems, automobiles and running shoes. You see, if the empire is all about economic growth driven by a lifestyle of consumption, then all of life becomes a matter of consumption - including our sexual life. â€ There is no point in getting all morally absolute about sexual promiscuity if Christians are screwing around with the same consumeristic way of life as everyone else. This text gives us the language to identify what is going on here for what it is: idolatry.â€• (p162). How do you see sexual immorality as being greed and idolatry? What is the value of the alternatives?

6. What is your reaction to this quote? â€œDoes the child who sits in front of a television set for three to four hours a day, shops at the mall with her parents, goes to school and recites the Pledge of Allegiance, plays computer games, listens to her president encouraging everyone to go out shopping in order to defeat terrorism, wears clothes from the Gap, and plays with the toys created out of the imagination of Disney and Hollywood, ever actually choose the American way of life? â€ Was there a moment of conversion in her life when the American dream became her dream? No. She imbibed the monocultural consumerist dream in the fast food she ate, the polluted air she breathed and the visual culture she inhabited. And so she was converted, made into a cult member, before she knew what was happening.â€• (p171).

7. If Christians are not to be at home in an empire characterized by sexual sin, greed, and violence, the authors ask what should the Kingdom look like? They proposed a life lived where the peace of the victim of an empire cross is spread, where community is lived, gratitude is practiced, and worship proclaims that Christ not Caesar is Lord of our lives. Practical suggestions the authors give include - pledging our allegiance to Christ not to the empire; investing as much each year in the hurtingâ€™s present needs as we do in our future retirement; paying attention to where our food comes from and whatâ€™s in it; setting up food co-ops where you can get food produced as locally as possible, in environmentally responsible ways, and that seeks to do justice to the producer of the food; be ecologically responsible by reducing our use of cars and start walking, biking, or using (or lobbying for) public transit; be good stewards of the ecosystem and stop dumping diapers (for babies or women) into the landfills (and hence streams and rivers). How do you react to those suggestions? What else could you add?

8. We can argue until we are blue in the face that Colossians is good news for an oppressed and marginalized community at the heart of the Roman empire, but unless this good news is for those truly at the margins - slaves, children, and women- it is nothing but a noisy gong and a clanging cymbal. (p201). But the household codes in Colossians 3:18 -4:1 have more often been interpreted as justification for oppression of those groups instead of good news. The authors address this issue through a fantastic expanded account of Onesimus (the slave) and Nympha (who had a house church) - this story is worth the price of the book imho. The authors propose that the household codes can be interpreted as (1) Just an affirmation of the imperial view of the household, the Aristotelian hierarchy of man over women and all that (not likely if this letter is about subverting empire and not being captive to the philosophies of men). (2) A loving patriarchy when the wives and slaves choose to submit and husbands (amazingly enough) love and not beat their wives (wow - that seems so full of hope) . or (3) Paul is challenging the status quo by promoting the freedom and full rights of women and slaves. He couldnâ€™t of course say so directly because to commit that to writing would lead to serious persecution from the empire for such revolutionary practices. But the language he uses connotes the themes of inheritance and jubilee. Remember that Colossians was delivered and read with Philemon (about treating a slave as an equal) and the subversion is evident. Are we willing to challenge systems that oppress others if it means questioning the philosophies and assumptions of empire (ending global slavery, grant equal rights to women, not treating children as commodities)?

English Translation:

MARU, FIFTH MEHL, SOLHAS:

ONE UNIVERSAL CREATOR GOD. BY THE GRACE OF THE TRUE GURU:

The Guru is the Lord of the World, the Guru is the Master of the Universe. The Guru is merciful, and always forgiving. The Guru is the Shaastras, the Simritees and the six rituals. The Guru is the Holy Shrine. || 1 ||

Meditating in remembrance on the Guru, all sinful residues are erased. Meditating in remembrance on the Guru, one is not strangled by the noose of Death. Meditating in remembrance on the Guru, the mind becomes immaculate; the Guru eliminates egotistical pride. || 2 ||

The Guruâ€™s servant is not consigned to hell. The Guruâ€™s servant meditates on the Supreme Lord God. The Guruâ€™s servant joins the Saadh Sangat, the Company of the Holy; the Guru ever gives the life of the soul. || 3 ||

At the Gurdwara, the Guru's Gate, the Kirtan of the Lord's Praises are sung. Meeting with the True Guru, one chants the Lord's Praises. The True Guru eradicates sorrow and suffering, and bestows honor in the Court of the Lord.

The Guru has revealed the inaccessible and unfathomable Lord. The True Guru returns to the Path, those who have wandered away. No obstacles stand in the way of devotion to the Lord, for one who serves the Guru. The Guru implants perfect spiritual wisdom. || 5 ||

The Guru has revealed the Lord everywhere. The Lord of the Universe is permeating and pervading the water and the land. The high and the low are all the same to Him. Focus your mind's meditation intuitively on Him. || 6 ||

Meeting with the Guru, all thirst is quenched. Meeting with the Guru, one is not watched by Maya. The Perfect Guru bestows truth and contentment; I drink in the Ambrosial Nectar of the Naam, the Name of the Lord. || 7 ||

The Word of the Guru's Bani is contained in all. He Himself hears it, and He Himself repeats it. Those who meditate on it, are all emancipated; they attain the eternal and unchanging home. || 8 ||

The Glory of the True Guru is known only to the True Guru. Whatever He does, is according to the Pleasure of His Will. Your humble servants beg for the dust of the feet of the Holy; Nanak is forever a sacrifice to You.

18th Arms Century Highlanders Man

Arm Doubt ; 18th Arms Century Highlanders Man Kiss of the Highlander by Karen Marie Moning, X A LAIRD TRAPPED BETWEEN CENTURIES Enchanted by a powerful spell, Highland laird Drustan MacKeltar slumbered for nearly five centuries hidden deep in a cave, until an unlikely savior awakened him. The enticing lass who dressed and spoke like no woman he'd ever known was from his distant future, where crumbled ruins were all that remained of his vanished world. Drustan knew he had to return to his own century if he was to save his people from a terrible fate. And he needed the bewitching woman by his side.... A WOMAN CHANGED FOREVER IN HIS ARMS Gwen Cassidy had come to Scotland to shake up her humdrum life and, just maybe, meet a man. How could she have known that a tumble down a Highland ravine would send her plunging into an underground cavern -- to land atop the most devastatingly seductive man she'd ever seen? Or that once he'd kissed her, he wouldn't let her go? Bound to Drustan by a passion stronger than time, Gwen is swept back to sixteenth-century Scotland, where a treacherous enemy plots against them...and where a warrior with the power to change history will defy time itself for the woman he loves.... Arm Doubt Highland Spirits by Amanda Scott, In this sequel to "Highland Secrets" and "Highland Treasure," Scott sweeps readers back into 18th century Scotland for a breathtaking saga of romance in which a young beauty meets the man of her dreams. Local author signings. Arm Doubt A Man's A Man for A' That - The Scots song A Man's a man for a' that by Robert Burns is known for its expression of egalitarian ideas of society which may be seen as anticipating the ideas of liberalism which arose in the 18th century and socialism which arose in the 19th century. It is known in translations into other European languages, in German for example as Trotz alledem und alledem. The Man in the Iron Mask (film) - There have been several movies entitled The Man in the Iron Mask, all based on the final section of the novel The Vicomte de Bragelonne by Alexandre Dumas, which was itself based on the 18th century myth of The Man in the Iron Mask. Man catcher - A man catcher is an esoteric type of pole weapon which was used in Europe as late as the 18th century. It consisted of a pole mounted with a two pronged head. Science of man - In the 18th century experimental philosophy was used as a method by David Hume to achieve his significant developments in the understanding of Human Nature, including senses, impressions, ideas, imagination, passions, morality, justice, to the point where human society as a whole could be explained through this experimental philosophy. This method was used to formulate the science of man, or the 'science of human nature' in A Treatise of Human Nature (1739). 18tharmscenturyhighlandersman These form part of the 18th century Scotland for a breathtaking saga of romance in which a young beauty meets the man of her dreams. Retort: Our Members are Hardcore

A little local news: Retort member TFDNihilist has a band, Total Fucking Destruction, that signed with Translation Loss Records earlier this year and just released an album that Heathen Harvest calls a "natural disaster [that] tears through anything and everything killing and brutalizing without remorse or emotion, but somehow manages to retain all the beauty and complexity of other parts of nature." There's still time to get one for Mother's Day. (Download link)

Campaign to free translator Umida Niyazova

Tashkent, Uzbekistan (Freedom House): Umida Niyazova's trial restarted on Tuesday morning, but neither her family nor local civil society groups were informed of the trial in time, though they were allowed to come in late. Umida pleaded guilty of illegal border crossing but said she was innocent of the other two charges. No new charges were brought against her. She was convicted of seven years in prison and will appeal the sentence. A member of Veritas, a popular new Uzbek human rights group, Umida also worked as a translator for Human Rights Watch and is a former Freedom House employee

China: interpreter released

Texas, USA (Christian Newswire): China Aid Association has learned through credible sources that the persecution against believers in Xinjiang intensified after the recent massive arrest on April 19, 2007 in Akesu city, Xinjiang province. About 30 major house church leaders were arrested when they met with four American Christians. US government sources tell CAA that after intensive diplomacy and media pressure, the four Americans have been released and are home as of late last week. Their interpreter Mr. Jinhong Li was also released and sent home to Beijing on May 1.

First New Zealand Sign Language Week

Auckland, New Zealand (Scoop): Auckland City Libraries is supporting the first ever New Zealand Sign Language Week 7-13 May with sign language classes and a signed storytime. During New Zealand Sign Language Week, the Deaf community and the public will celebrate the anniversary of New Zealand Sign Language (NZSL) becoming New Zealand's third official language last year. The Central City Library and five community libraries will host NZSL "taster" classes throughout the week, which will be taught by members of the NZ Sign Language Teachers Association.

Jordan: report on Second International Translation Conference

Amman, Jordan (Dar Al-Hayat): I write this against the backdrop of attending a conference in Amman organized by the Arab Thought Foundation that began with the fourth Arab Forum on Education and continued with the Second International Translation Conference. [â€¦] I tried to benefit and be of benefit, and was glad that the attention afforded to translation and books exceeded my expectations as there were some of the world's most prominent researchers and experts there.

Blackberry interference with simultaneous translation systems

New Brunswick, Canada (CBC): There's considerably less "buzz" in the New Brunswick legislature this week, as the Speaker has banned the use of BlackBerrys in the house, hoping to clear up problems with the simultaneous translation system. Speaker Eugene McGinley is concerned that the constant buzzing of the wireless communications devices could interfere with the simultaneous translation staff as they try to hear what the politicians are saying.

Irish becomes subject at Cambridge University

Cambridge, UK (Examiner): Irish has become an official subject at Cambridge University, it was announced today. While the university already teaches medieval Irish, the new addition will mean that for the first time, common, modern elements of both Gaelic language and literature will be on offer for students. [â€] Irish was granted official European status in January, taking its place as the 23rd language of the EU.

Sorenson Communications urges fair and predictable rate for VRS

Utah, USA (Business Wire): The National Exchange Carrier Association (NECA) has filed a report with the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) on proposed rates for Telecommunications Relay Services (TRS), which include Video Relay Service (VRS), TTY, IP Relay, and Speech-to-Speech (STS). NECA failed to recommend any rate for VRS, but, instead, listed various rates based on data supplied to NECA by the VRS providers.
