Alex Litvinenko speaks of Anna Politkovskaya's Murder: Frontline

Just so you fully understand their relationship, he refers to her in the diminutive, Annochka, meaning that they were close friends, very close. It brought tears to my eyes. The other thing in this that I found the most disturbing is when he speaks of a question she asked him on their last meeting, and it reminded me of that same question I too have asked. It sent chills down my spine to hear that question, and his response. ; You always think you are being paranoid in these types of situations, so you think that you are the only one asking such questions. It was disturbing to watch, but watch it, despite the poor translation.

Repositioning accuracy of two different mask systems-3D revisited: Comparison using true 3D/3D matching with cone-beam CT.

Int J Radiat Oncol Biol Phys. 2006 Dec 1;66(5):1568-75

Authors: Boda-Heggemann J, Walter C, Rahn A, Wertz H, Loeb I, Lohr F, Wenz F

Purpose: The repositioning accuracy of mask-based fixation systems has been assessed with two-dimensional/two-dimensional or two-dimensional/three-dimensional (3D) matching. We analyzed the accuracy of commercially available head mask systems, using true 3D/3D matching, with X-ray volume imaging and cone-beam CT. Methods and Materials: Twenty-one patients receiving radiotherapy (intracranial/head-and-neck tumors) were evaluated (14 patients with rigid and 7 with thermoplastic masks). X-ray volume imaging was analyzed online and offline separately for the skull and neck regions. Translation/rotation errors of the target isocenter were analyzed. Four patients were treated to neck sites. For these patients, repositioning was aided by additional body tattoos. A separate analysis of the setup error on the basis of the registration of the cervical vertebra was performed. The residual error after correction and intrafractional motility were calculated. Results: The mean length of the displacement vector for rigid masks was 0.312 +/- 0.152 cm (intracranial) and 0.586 +/- 0.294 cm (neck). For the thermoplastic masks, the value was 0.472 +/- 0.174 cm (intracranial) and 0.726 +/- 0.445 cm (neck). Rigid masks with body tattoos had a displacement vector length in the neck region of 0.35 +/- 0.197 cm. The intracranial residual error and intrafractional motility after X-ray volume imaging correction for rigid masks was 0.188 +/- 0.074 cm, and was 0.134 +/- 0.14 cm for thermoplastic masks. Conclusions: The results of our study have demonstrated that rigid masks have a high intracranial repositioning accuracy per se. Given the small residual error and intrafractional movement, thermoplastic masks may also be used for high-precision treatments when combined with cone-beam CT. The neck region repositioning accuracy was worse than the intracranial accuracy in both cases. However, body tattoos and image guidance improved the accuracy. Finally, the combination of both mask systems with 3D image guidance has the potential to replace therapy simulation and intracranial stereotaxy.

Do You Memorize Translated Chinese Classic Poems in English?

Poetry is a perfectly integrated unity inextricably embedded in a culture. A lot of educated Chinese recite classic Chinese poems; these poems are alive and living among these people.

If such poems are translated into English, is the English version of poems recited, either by the Chinese people or the English readers?

If you do recite such poems, can you tell me how do you feel about the intensity and beauty of such translations?

UCLOO - A very scary sourcing product

Want to see something really scary? Check out the homepage of Ucloo.

Gee it looks like Google doesn't it? And in case you have not noticed it, the site is in Chinese. ; Ucloo is a "people search engine" ala LinkedIn and (coming soon) Spock.com. ; Check out an english-translation of one of the profiles.

Okay, so you're not impressed. Let me help you out a bit.

With a few simple strokes (in Chinese), you see on any given profile: Name, Birthday, Contact information, education, work background, pictures, online activity (what you have posted in what online forum and where, websites ;frequented), all of your email addresses, who you have corresponded with via email, who you have chatted with via instant messenger ; and (check this out!) it even lists the court records of an individual.

Want to hear more?

Ucloo ; also offers up (at an affordable price - ;$0.12 in US Dollars) home addresses, job status, personal records on property, bank credit, and marital status on 90 million Chinese people and counting! ;Oohhh... ; Did I mention that all of this information was appropriated and sold without the permission of the the person being profiled? They even had to settle some umm... legal issues about how they gathered their info. ; And it looks like the Chinese people are not jumping for joy over the product.

Ucloo is a small start up, with less than 10 staff, registered in Seattle. The company CEO is Steve Wu, a US citizen. ; I wonder how much of his info is on Ucloo? (I don't know Chinese so I couldn't ;investigate - sorry.)

If you can't get enough of this stuff, here is some more reading for you.

No safety net for personal privacy on Internet

Personal Info earch Engine Evoking Controversy

So this brings to mind a question, how much is too much information? And better yet, I wonder what the US-version will look like. (I am assuming that one is on the way.) Your thoughts?

AMD's Quad FX Takes On Intel's Quad Core

AMD's dual-socket Quad FX platform is official. Code named the 4x4 platform, its AMD's answer to Intel's Quad Core chips. The platform is powered by two dual-core Athlon 64 FX-70 series processors. Its based around Nvidia's nForce 680a chipset and as we've already seen from Asus' initial 4x4 mobo, can support up to 12 SATA ports and four PCI-Express cards. The folks at PC Watch and ExtremeTech have done some early benchmarking on the chips comparing them to Intel's Quad Core CPUs and found this out.

AMD's QuadFX power consumption is far higher than Intel's Quad Core. In fact, it uses almost double the amount of watts (589 vs 318). The irony is that in the past the tables were usually the other way around.

Performance-wise, ExtremeTech found out in multiple tests that Intel's solution usually came out ahead of AMD's Quad FX platform. Again, this doesn't look good for AMD, who's not only late to the party, but is now taking a beating from the competition.

However, compared to Intel's $999 Core 2 Extreme QX6700, AMD's chips (the FX-74, FX-72, and FX-70) will be sold in pairs for $999, $799, and $599 respectively. And when AMD's quad-core CPUs are unleashed next year, you'll be able to pop them into the Quad FX platform and build yourself an eight-core Quad FX system (and take over the world). – Louis Ramirez

Withdrawal from Iraq will mean death for translators

On The Web (PV): Withdrawal means that the United States will have to watch Iraqis die in ever greater numbers without doing much of anything to prevent it, because the welfare of Iraqis will no longer be among our central concerns. Those Iraqis who have had anything to do with the occupation and its promises of democracy will be among the first to be killed: the translators. [â€] For a military translator to have a chance at coming to the United States, he must be able to prove that he worked for at least a year with U.S. forces and have the recommendation of a general officer--nearly impossible in most cases. Our current approach essentially traps Iraqis inside their country, where they will have to choose, like Osman, between jihadists and death squads.

College sued by Attorney General's Office for providing unskilled sign-language interpreters

Arizona, USA (AZ): The state Attorney General's Office is suing Pima Community College, charging it didn't provide the help a hearing-impaired student needed. Legal papers filed in Maricopa County Superior Court say the college did provide sign-language interpreters so that Stacey Duvall could understand what her instructors in the pharmacy technology program were saying. But Assistant Attorney General Sandra Kane said in at least two of the cases, Duvall could not understand the interpreters.

Trial postponed two years for lack of interpreter

Cuttack, India (CT): Ten members of the Koya tribe have languished in jail without trial for the past two years for want of an interpreter. Malkangiri police arrested the 10 tribals in 2004 for allegedly attending a rally in Bhubaneswar, organised by the Daman Pratirodh Manch, a front organisation of the Maoists. As the trial court has no interpreter to record the statements of witnesses from the tribe, who can speak and understand only the Koya language, trial of the 10 accused is yet to begin.
