Live Action Pac-Man

It's totally ok if you don't speak Japanese; just make sure you speak the international language of goofy and nothing will be lost in translation here. We feel is the best video game recreation of the year. Also, it's the only one, but since being posted on YouTube on January 1, it's gotten a boatload of views and more than 30 blogs (and a few lesser known video sites) have chosen to feature this JAPANESE TV gem.

If the geek inside you isn't singing Pac-Man Fever then you should probably watch this Buckner & Garcia performance on the hit 80's fiasco "SOLID GOLD". BTW ... Is it just us or do you think the dude in the picture looks like Hideki Matsui?

Morning Buzz: Friday 1.5.07

Mayor Villaraigosa picks up another tribute from People en espaÃ±ol, a strange phone call to Channel 2 about Jim Lampley's arrest, Pellicano's day in court and a flock of other items await after the jump. Click for a neat little roundup of just the L.A. news you want to know about. Later this morning, check out Mark Lacter's first look at the headlines at LA Biz Observed.

And from yesterday on LA Observed, don't miss the reappearance of a tape of Martin Luther King speaking in Hollywood 42 years ago, Rip Rense's email about Du-Par's, Pulp Fiction's trouble with L.A. geography and the view from Malibu and Echo Park.

Politics

Muy influyentes

People en espaÃ±ol puts Mayor Antonio Villaraigosa on its new list of the 100 most influential Hispanics. On the English-language website gallery he's the first to come up who isn't an entertainer. Well, officially.

Poor Lynwood

The troubled city is listening to a pitch from a developer who wants to build an NFL stadium, even though getting a team there would be a longshot.

Media

How Channel 2 learned about Lampley

Assignment editor Mark Liu blogs about the strange anonymous phone call he received at the desk.

Eventually he figured out that former CBS-2 anchor Jim Lampley was in custody.

SAG chief wants to stay

Screen Actors Guild president Alan Rosenberg confirmed that he will seek another two-year term.

El Cucuy is big news

The arrest of popular deejay RenÃ­n AlmendrÃ©rez Coello was the lede story in yesterday's La OpiniÃ³n.

Daniel Hernandez gives the story a read and a translation.

What's up with Pellicano?

The jailed private investigator will make a motion today to represent himself at his upcoming federal trial, the Daily Journal reports.

Name reappears

For years Judy Dugan was a Times editorial pages writer and editor, laboring mostly behind the scenes.

Today her name graces the op-ed page as co-author of a piece on health insurance reform. She is research director for the Foundation for Taxpayer and Consumer Rights.

New time for Lores Rizkalla

Lores Rizkalla Live moves to Sundays at 7 pm on KRLA 870 AM, from 10 pm, starting this weekend.

Police beat

MTA bus hits tree, driver killed

He had just dropped off his last passenger of the night in Willowbrook.

Noted

Mary Frampton, photographer was 76

She was among the first female staff photographers at the Los Angeles Times and later a Malibu activist. LAT obit

Find Estate Planning Lawyer New Jersey

New Jersey Lawyer ; Estate Planning Lawyer New Jersey Gold Coast, New Jersey - New Jersey's Gold Coast consists of a string of communities on the west bank of the Hudson River, across from New York City in Hudson and Bergen counties. The term is a relatively new one and was coined by real estate agents, brokers, and developers in the 1990s who participated in the redevelopment and revitalization of these former industrial communities. Radburn, New Jersey - Radburn is an unincorporated new town located within Fair Lawn, New Jersey, which was founded in 1929 as "a town for the motor age." Its planners, Clarence Stein and Henry Wright, aimed to incorporate modern planning principles, which were then being introduced into England's Garden Cities, following the ideals of urban planners Ebenezer Howard and Sir Patrick Geddes. John Kean (New Jersey) - John Kean (December 4, 1852 - November 4, 1914) was an American lawyer and banker from Elizabeth, New Jersey. He represented New Jersey in the U. ### What Kind of Freaky Milk Do They Have in China?

No seriously...noticed something today and am trying to figure out if it's bad translation, or symptomatic of a REALLY big problem in China. What am I talking about? Well, Elnora got one of those little grocery baskets filled with fake groceries for Christmas. You know, fruits, little boxes of cereal, ketchup bottles and so on. Well, one of the ...

Historical linguistics

London, UK (Blackwell): The appearance of this book is one of the most exciting events in historical linguistics in many decades: the book is a stunning achievement. No historical linguist can afford to ignore Hale's attempt to provide a solid theoretical foundation for the field's methodological successes, and to link synchronic theoretical linguistics to the study of language change. Hale's perspective is original and stimulating, as is his lively writing style; some of his claims are sure to be controversial, but those who disagree with him will have to work hard to counter his arguments."

Sarah Thomason, University of Michigan

Poverty, malnutrition and weaker language skills

London, UK (New Scientist): At least 200 million children under the age of five currently fail to reach their full intellectual potential, a new study of developing countries estimates. Researchers blame the problem on malnutrition and inadequate cognitive and social stimulation. They also stress that many of these children could achieve their full potential with the help of relatively simple, low-cost programmes. [â€] Another study conducted in Ecuador revealed that poor toddlers had weaker language skills than their wealthier counterparts.

Translation, the problem and the solution

Washington, USA (Payvand): The ruling powers of the East and the West are unable or unwilling to communicate with each other. Apparently, they lack a common set of values, common language or common means of communication. It seems they do not share the same communication protocols. Often, messages sent back and forth are encrypted at one end and decrypted at the other end. The signals transmitted by one side are often interpolated by the other side as having hidden agendas. Hence, the end result is a complete miscommunication. [â€] The third party - intermediaries and interpreters - have further exasperated these complexities. The challenge to solve this miscommunication conundrum is to decode the signals transmitted by both sides and translate them into a simple conversational language.

Braille-on-the-back

Pennsylvania, USA (New Scientist): A vibrating vest that writes messages on its wearer's back is being tested by researchers in the US. In future, it could be used to send important commands to soldiers or fire-fighters, warning them of imminent danger when ordinary radios cannot be used, for example. [â€!] Commands sent from the computer are translated into patterns "displayed" â€" like Braille-on-the-back â€" by the vibrating motors. The wearer's back was chosen to receive messages because it is a relatively large area that is also less likely to sustain damage.

Lost civilizations and climate change

Berlin, Germany (New Scientist): The downfall of the one of the greatest Chinese dynasties may have been catalysed by severe changes in climate. The same climate changes may have simultaneously led to the end of the Maya civilisation depicted in Mel Gibson's new film Apocalypto. So says Gerald Haug of the GeoForschungsZentrum in Germany and colleagues, who studied geological records of monsoons over the past 16,000 years.

Making the Internet more language-friendly

California, USA (Network): The University of California, Berkeley, has been awarded about $300,000 in new funding to continue its effort over the next two years to make writing systems for all languages work on the Internet. The initiative, already four years old, will focus on encoding eight scripts this year and eight more next year. These include Javanese and assorted Native American languages. More than 80 writing systems are not yet in Unicode, the international character-encoding standard used on the 'Net, according to the university.
