At the San Francisco Ballet " Program 6 continues with NIGHT, ON COMMON GROUND, and RODEO

By SeÅn Martinfield

Sentinel Fine Arts Critic

Copyright Å 2007 San Francisco Sentinel

Choreographer Julia Adamâ™s NIGHT is a fantastically imagined dreamscape. The soundscape consists of selections from the provocative âNight Groovesâ by composer Matthew Pierce " including beautiful renditions of Present, Office Parks and Strip Malls, African Smile, Salvadori Dali. The music can be sampled on-line and an order placed for the next issue of CDs. Onstage, the dancersâ translation of kinetic energy into suggestions of pursuit and resistance, desire and invasion was engaging and perplexing.

San Francisco Ballet premiered NIGHT in 2000. The 30-minute ballet draws-out imagery and bursts of energy common to everyoneâs dream life " those odd projections of personalities and events, the three-dimensional embodiments of combined symbols and ideas " all drifting through and lifting the mind during what should be the lull of sleep. There is never a choice of subject, but sometimes an episode to settle upon " such as the momentary whim of an armchair channel-flipper. In the midst of such visions there can be a subjective choice to join it, judge it, jettison from it, or just hang-out until itâs over!

Adamsâ NIGHT. Images by Erik Tomasson

Marking its world premiere, Helgi Tomassonâs ON COMMON GROUND utilizes nine movements from composer Ned Roremâs String Quartet No. 4. While not a âdreamâ, the production does inspire a fantastical appreciation of San Francisco Ballet " its amazingly diverse company of dancers, the daring use of music never intended as dance, the frequent absence of scenery and the filling up of the cavernous space with brilliant choreography, and the incomparable talents of conductor Martin West and the Ballet Orchestra. As with the SF Symphony, jeweled solo opportunities are provided to its individual members. Cello soloist David Kadarauich lavished a fiery temperament through the rich edginess of Rorem's point / counter-point composition. Displayed in simple athletic-type attire designed by Sandra Woodall, under the warm lighting designs of Michael Mazzola " the awesome physical strength and artistic sharpness of this uncommonly sensual collection of Classically grounded dancers invites the highest levels of artistic appreciation.

The perennial favorite, Agnes de Mille's RODEO, lassoes dreams and fantasies into an always welcoming round-up of trysts, trials and traditions. In the Opening Night Spotlight as "The Cowgirl" was Kristin Long, a member of San Francisco Ballet since 1990. Shining-in from the Corps de Ballet " tall and lovely Pauli Magierek as "The Farmer's Daughter" was swept away by the charms of "Wrangler" Aaron Orza (a native of Walnut Creek and possible nominee for the Clint Walker Look-A-Like Contest).

But Rory Hohenstein was MVP throughout the evening, appearing prominently in all three works. Promoted to Soloist in 2006, Mr. Hohenstein captured just about everybody's heart with his stunning work in last season's ELEMENTAL BRUBECK. In this presentation of Program 6, Rory Hohenstein proves his sensuality in NIGHT, his teamwork and compatibilities through ON COMMON GROUND, and as a nimble tapper and supporting romantic lead in RODEO. An emphatic "Yes, Sir!" pierced through the bravos at his curtain call.

Album Reviews: Koko Taylor, Los Straitjackets

Koko Taylor - Old School ; I saw Koko Taylor about a year ago in Chicago, dressed in a gold lame jumpsuit and strutting her sassy stuff at the House of Blues. It was one of those corporate events where everyone's too busy networking to listen to the live talent. Me, I'm the sort of person who can't sit in a piano bar without applauding everytime the pianist finishes a number; I just parked myself with a drink and got lost in the music. How could these people not be mesmerized by this act? I wondered. Here's a 70-some-year-old woman ;who's not afraid to growl and howl and get a little raunchy – in other words, not afraid to sing the blues. Almost 50 years in the business, and nothing's managed to smooth down or prettify Koko Taylor's feisty energy. She's inherited Bessie Smith's mantle as Queen of the Blues, and she's hanging onto it tight. On her new CD – appropriately named Old School – Koko does her best to take us back to the dingy smoke-filled Chicago blues joints where she hung out in the 1950s with folks like Howlin' Wolf and Muddy Waters. Her backing band has that gritty sound down just right, with a hammering piano and buzzing guitar; guitarist Criss Johnson peels off some amazing licks indeed. This is a late-night record, the kind that washes down well with cheap whiskey or a cold bottle of beer; if you can get a neon bar-sign blinking ;across the street, all the better. The very first track leads off with a bone-shivering primal howl -- "Hey, y'all -- listen to me / I wanna tell you a thing or two / You can believe it or not / Know what I'm talking about / Every word ;I say is true." Listening to this CD, I realize how rare it is to hear the woman's side of the blues -- the straight truth about female desire and survival and the price women pay for putting up with men. Who else tells it like this? Bonnie Raitt's the only other singer I can think of who delivers the same goods. Taylor wrote five tracks for the album herself (the other seven include two by her mentor Willie Dixon) and those originals are my favorites: every one's a feminist manifesto, old-school style. You can't get any more sexually confident and pissed-off than songs like "Piece of Man" or "You Ain't Worth A Good Woman" and "Better Watch your Step," where she reads the riot act to a no-account man who's done her wrong. ("Lay around my house, baby, seven days a week / Soon as I turn my back there's a woman out in the street...") A classic blues complaint, but so what? It still applies. It's enormously satisfying to hear this woman snap out lyrics like "I'm gonna buy me a mule / One can take the place of you / He won't have to look no further / I'll give him all that belongs to you." I'm telling you, guys, women really do think like this. So why do we put up with you? Because -- as Koko tells us on that first track -- "A piece of man / Is better than no man at all." Amen, sister. Los Straitjackets' Rock En Español Vol. I Koko Taylor's roots are different from mine, I'll admit. Los Straitjackets, though? Their roots are plenty familiar to me. I too grew up listening to the Ventures and Duane Eddy, and this instrumental combo -- who hail from Tennessee and for some demented reason wear lucho libre face masks on stage -- are masters of that surf-twang guitar sound, a sound that cries out for driving a convertible on a sunny California afternoon. But for Rock En Español Vol 1, they've lined up guest vocalists to pay homage to a subgenre of music that was completely off my radar until now -- Latino covers of 1960s rock 'n' roll hits. And the more I listen, the more I dig it. It's a little disconcerting to hear these familiar tracks with Spanish vocals, but the way Los Straitjackets rips into them, I buy the concept. These songs are played with such energy and conviction, the whole deal rises above being a novelty record. Three different lead singers -- Little Willie G., Big Sandy, and Cesar Rosas (of Los Lobos fame) -- each bring their own electricity to their tracks. While the arrangements are often close to the originals (they've really nailed that distinctive power-chord riff on "You Really Got Me"), the songs inevitably gain a little Mexicano flair just from the vocals. Of course, not every song is a literal translation of the English original -- dig "Dizzy Miss Lizzie" turned into "El Microscopico Bikini", "Slow Down" turned into "Calor" (Heat), "Devil Woman" turning into "Magia Blanca" ("White Magic"), and (here's my favorite) "Wild Thing" becoming "Loca to Patina el Coco" ("Crazy Person Slides the Coco to You"). That's what worked for the original south-of-the-border '45s -- you can't make this stuff up. The songs that I really get off on are the tear-loose dance party classics, like "Poison Ivy", "Slow Down", and "Bony Maronie" (excuse me, "Popotitos") where Los Straitjackets' smoking guitar work and tight rhythm section can shine. On the other hand, a torcher like "Lonely Teardrops" somehow oozes extra passion the way Big Sandy croons it, and good-time singalongs like "Hang On Sloopy" and "Wild Thing" have an irresistible sloppy charm. Frankly, there's not a song on the album that doesn't get more fun the more often you hear it. By stripping away the familiar lyrics, Los Straitjackets bring us back to the essence of these early rock-n-roll gems, and you know what? They hold up just fine. Just go find the car keys and give this CD a spin. Holly A Hughes has been a rock 'n roll fan since February 9, 1964. She's heard it all, on vinyl, cassettes, 8-track tapes, CDs, and mp3 files. But so long as it's got a good beat, she'll dance to it.

Common Sense Advisory Founder/President sheds light on globalization

Yesterday, we had the distinct pleasure of listening to Don dePalma (Founder and President of Common Sense Advisory). If you haven't heard of CSA, they are definitely worth a look. In a nutshell, CSA offers consultation services to help companies develop globalization strategies. He had a unique way of developing a successful model for which companies can use to become global. He highlighted 7 key points:

Management Decision
Planning

Product Offering Organization
Technology
Customer Support
Website

While this does not encompass everything that determines expansion, it is definitely a wide array of aspects to look into when becoming global.

Â The best part of his lecture was his analysis of globalization.Â People believe that globalization is the same as "Americanization" or "Homogenization".Â That is exactly what CSA defends.Â They ensure that the markets chosen for expansion are ready and willing for the product or service.Â CSA also ensures that the company in question understands the multicultural aspect their company will ensue.Â Mottos must be chosen carefully because direct translations can be misleading or hurtful to some specific consumer segment.

Globalization is definitely an interesting conundrum.Â It is crucial to understand your market, your customers, and your values before entering foreign markets.

Execution of interpreter condemned

Ottawa, Canada (Canada): Tom Koenigs, the UN's special representative to Afghanistan, condemned the slaying of Ajmal Naqshbandi and called on authorities to bring those responsible for his death to justice. "The perpetrators of this crime have shown absolute indifference to the value of human life by ignoring the calls of family, journalists and Afghans who with one voice called for his safe return," Koenigs said in a statement. [â€] La Repubblica's editor, Ezio Mauro, said in a statement on the paper's website that the newspaper staff was "living through hours of anguish" after news of the purported execution of Naqshbandi.
